BY: Melissa

One day there was a boy named Alan. Alan was a very special boy to his family. Alan had very bad social anxiety. At age 12 went to middle school and it was crowded.

Alan's mom and dad set a tracker on him to see if he could make it and he also had an emotional support dog named Ricky.

On the first day of school, he ran back to the car but on the 52 day of school he did make it to class, but he still had a problem.

Alan had no friends he had nobody to eat lunch with and nobody to invite to his birthday because he had to leave the school in five months, so he made a poster.

Alan wrote every cool thing about him on his paper like how his granny had a café called mama G café and his favorite food is parmesan pasta with extra parmesan and he loves the movie family trap.

The first week nothing the second week nothing again a whole month passed by, but nobody even peeked at the paper, so he went on the announcement and told everybody about his paper and people loved it.

He had finally had people to invite to his party and has people to sit with at lunch.

Months pass by he had 2 weeks left at his school, so he had his party early it was going to be at the new laser tag place in Sugarland it was going to be so much fun.

At the party

All the people he invited came to his party everything was going great he had friends he got their phone numbers so when he left, he could still talk to them.

His friends were so sad that he was leaving so they went to beg Alans parents to let him stay two days pass, but they did not agree little did his friends not know they were going to stay in Texas.

When Alans friends thought Alan only had a week left in Texas Alans parents were going to break the news.

Two days pass

Alans parents send all of Alans friends a card that tells them Alan is not going to leave Texas.

The next day at school Alan get so many gifts from all him Friends say I hope you love staying in Texas but Alan was confused because he had not known he was staying in Texas so his friend told him the news he was so joyful that he was going to stay with his friends and the people he loved.
